

Mathematical Genealogy

Jonathan Farley had support from many people in his life. While he was at Oxford, he took a number of courses in various fields of mathematics. His main training to become a mathematician was the independent research he conducted. His advisor, Dr. H. A. Priestley, supervised this research. I have no other names of any of Farley's mentors. I tried finding information on Dr. H. A. Priestley, but I was unable to do so.
