

Getting to know a scholar: Gurney Buchanan October 21 - October 27

Background: Gurney Buchanan is from Wilkesboro, North Carolina, where he attended Millers Creek Christian School. Gurney is currently a graduate student majoring in computer science. His favorite subject is Web Development, and his favorite class is Algorithms “because it’s fun and challenging.” His hobbies include playing board/tabletop games (he hosts board game night every Friday night!), biking, and reading. As for why he chose this major: “I always enjoyed working with computers and all forms of technology, but always wanted to know more about how it worked and actually do something beyond basic use.” He chose to attend Appalachian State University because “I was immediately comfortable when I visited the University. During my first visit, I met Dr. T and the first BeeMon team and talked for a few hours! It felt like home and I knew it was where I wanted to go!”
