Advice from Previous Students

- It is easy to forget about it. Block a regular time in your schedule for homework.
- Make sure the topic you choose for the course project is something you are interested in. If it isn't, you can change it at the end, but it is better to choose something good from the beginning.
- Remember that some weeks will have less homework than others. Spend any spare time on the course project so that your last weeks of class are not too crazy. The workload overall was fine.
- Dr. Sarah has set up the course project to be completed in steps to help you. Take advantage of these and her help. I hadn't realized that I could bring coding problems in to her office hours.
- Do not procrastinate and keep a regular checking period of the syllabus.
